1 Stats 21 - HW 3

1.1 Charles Liu (304804942)

Homework copyright Miles Chen. Problems have been adapted from the exercises in Think Python 2nd Ed by Allen B. Downey.

This is your third homework assignment.

The questions have been entered into this document. You will modify the document by entering your code.

Make sure you run the cell so the requested output is visible. Download the finished document as either a PDF or an HTML file.

You will submit:

- the rendered HTML/PDF file
- this ipynb file with your answers

1.2 Reading

- Chapters 7 to 11

Please keep up with the reading. The chapters are short.

More reading:

- String methods documentation <https://docs.python.org/3/library/stdtypes.html#string-methods>

1.2.1 Exercise 8.3

A string slice can take a third index that specifies the “step size”; that is, the number of spaces between successive characters. A step size of 2 means every other character; 3 means every third, etc. You can even have negative values.

Use a string slice to create a one line function for `is_palindrome()`

```
[1]: def first(text):
      return text[0]
      def last(text):
          return text[-1]
      def middle(text):
```

```
return text[1:-1]
```

```
[2]: def is_palindrome(text):
    if(len(text) <= 1):
        return(True)
    if(first(text) != last(text)):
        return(False)
    return(is_palindrome(middle(text)))
```

```
[3]: is_palindrome("racecar")
```

```
[3]: True
```

```
[4]: is_palindrome("racecars")
```

```
[4]: False
```

1.3 Chapter 9

The following exercises have been adapted from Think Python.

1.3.1 Exercise 9.1

Download this list of words: <http://thinkpython2.com/code/words.txt>

Write and run a script that reads `words.txt` and prints out only the words with more than 20 characters (after stripping whitespace).

```
[5]: fin = open("words.txt")
for line in fin:
    word = line.strip()
    if len(word) > 19:
        print(word)
```

```

1.3.2 Exercise 9.2

Write a function called `has_no_e` that returns True if the word doesn't have the letter e. You can use any of Python's available string methods.

```
[6]: def has_no_e(text):
      for letter in text:
          if letter == 'e':
              return False
      return True
```

```
[7]: has_no_e("hello")
```

```
[7]: False
```

```
[8]: has_no_e("quit")
```

```
[8]: True
```

With your function, write a script. The script should read the list of words (`words.txt`), print out the number of words that do not have the letter 'e' and the proportion of words that do not have the letter 'e'

```
[9]: fin = open("words.txt") number_of_words = 0
count = 0
for line in fin:
    number_of_words = number_of_words + 1 words = line.strip()
    if words.find("e") == -1:
        print(words)
        count = count + 1
proportion_of_words_has_no_e = (count / number_of_words)
print("Proportion:", proportion_of_words_has_no_e)
```

1.3.3 Exercise 9.3

Write a function named `avoids` that takes a word and a string of forbidden letters, and that returns True if the word doesn't use any of the forbidden letters.

```
[10]: def avoids(word, forbidden):
      for letter in forbidden:
```

```
        if letter in word:
            return False
    return True
```

```
[11]: avoids("hello", "e")
```

```
[11]: False
```

```
[12]: avoids("hello", "abc")
```

```
[12]: True
```

```
[13]: avoids("hello", "abcde")
```

```
[13]: False
```

Write a function named `prop_avoiding` that accepts a string of forbidden letters and then returns the proportion of words that don't contain any of them.

```
[14]: def prop_avoiding(forbidden):
        fin = open("words.txt")
        count = 0
        total = 0
        for word in fin:
            if avoids(word, forbidden):
                count = count + 1
            total = total + 1 proportion_of_letter = (count / total) return proportion_of_letter
```

```
[15]: prop_avoiding("e")
```

```
[15]: 0.3307383423103621
```

Write a short script that prints the letters a-z and the proportion of words that avoid that letter.

```
[16]: alphabet = 'abcdefghijklmnopqrstuvwxyz' for letter in alphabet:
            print(letter, prop_avoiding(letter), sep = " ")
```

1.3.4 Exercise 9.4.

Write a function named `uses_only` that takes a word and a string of letters, and that returns `True` if the word contains only letters in the list.

```
[17]: def uses_only(word, allowed):
        for letter in word:
            if letter not in allowed:
                return False
        return True
```

Write a function to find all the words that use only the letters provided.

```
[18]: def find_all_allowed(allowed):
        fin = open("words.txt")
        list = []
        for line in fin:
            word = line.strip()
            take_letters = True for letter in allowed:
                if letter not in word:
                    take_letters = False
            if take_letters == True:
                list.append(word)
        return list
```

Now use the function to find all the words that can be made out of the letters in your first (given) name and/or your last (family) name.

DO NOT PRINT out the entire list of words. For some of you, the print out will be way too long.

Just find a few of the longest or most interesting words in the list.

```
[19]: find_all_allowed("Liu")
```

```

Write a function named `uses_all` that takes a word and a string of required letters, and that returns `True` if the word uses all the required letters at least once.

Find and print the shortest words that uses all the vowels `aeiou`.

Find and print the shortest words that uses all the vowels and `y` `aeiouy`.

1.3.6 Your choice: Exercise 9.7 - 9.9

Choose one of the “car talk” puzzles at the end of Chapter 9. The puzzles are all very well defined. Some of the solutions can be found by just “thinking” about the puzzle, but the purpose of the exercise is to find the solution with a bit of script programming.

I know the solutions are already provided on the book’s website. I promise, you will get much more out of the experience and find much more satisfaction if you write the code yourself.

They can be fun to solve and you are welcome to do all three of them if you wish, but I will not be giving extra credit for the additional effort.

Question 9.7 - 9.9: Choosing the first question Give me a word with three consecutive double letters. I’ll give you a couple of words that almost qualify, but don’t. For example, the word committee, c-o-m-m-i-t-t-e-e. It would be great except for the ‘i’ that sneaks in there. Or Mississippi: M-i-s-s-i-s-s-i-p-i. If you could take out those i’s it would work. But there is a word that has three consecutive pairs of letters and to the best of my knowledge this may be the only word. Of course there are probably 500 more but I can only think of one. What is the word?

If you find yourself truly stuck, set it aside and think about it for a day. The answer might come to you while you are not sitting in front of your computer.

If you’re still truly truly stuck, you can take a peek at the answer to see how it is done. Then set it aside, don’t write any code for a day. Then code up the answer with the framework in mind, but not the code itself.

```
[25]: def has_double_letters(word):
        index = 0
        count = 0
        while index < (len(word) - 1):
            if word[index] == word[index + 1]:
                index = (index + 2)
            if count == 3:
                return True

def find_double_words():
    fin = open("words.txt")
    for line in fin:
        word = line.strip()
        if has_double_letters(word):
            print(word)

1.3.7 Exercise 10.1.

Write a function called `nested_sum` that takes a list of lists of integers and adds up the elements from all of the nested lists. For example:

```
t = [[1, 2], [3], [4, 5, 6]]
nested_sum(t)
21
```

You may want to build the function recursively in case there are many levels of nested lists.

You can assume that all elements in any of the nested lists are numeric.

```
[27]: def nested_sum(t):
      total = 0
      for index in t:
          if not isinstance(index, list):
              total = (total + index)
          else:
              total = total + nested_sum(index)
      return total
```

```
[28]: t = [[1, 2], [3], [4, 5, 6]]
nested_sum(t)
```

```
[28]: 21
```

```
[29]: t = [1, 2]
nested_sum(t)
```

```
[29]: 3
```

```
[30]: x = [[1, 2, [3]], 4, 5, 6, [7], 8] nested_sum(x)
```

```
[30]: 36
```

```
[31]: t = [[[1, 2, [3]], [4, [5, 6, [7]]], 8]]
nested_sum(t)
```

```
[31]: 36
```

1.3.8 Exercise 10.2.

Write a function called `cumsum` that takes a list of numbers and returns the cumulative sum; that is, a new list where the i th element is the sum of the first $i + 1$ elements from the original list.

For example:

```
t = [1, 2, 3]
cumsum(t)
[1, 3, 6]
```

You can assume that all elements in the lists are numeric and the list does not contain nested lists.

```
[32]: def cumsum(t):
        total = 0
        new_list = []
        for index in t:
            total = total + index
            new_list.append(total) return new_list
```

```
[33]: cumsum([1, 2, 3, 4])
```

```
[33]: [1, 3, 6, 10]
```

```
[34]: cumsum(range(12))
```

```
[34]: [0, 1, 3, 6, 10, 15, 21, 28, 36, 45, 55, 66]
```

1.3.9 Exercise 10.6.

Two words are anagrams if you can rearrange the letters from one to spell the other. Write a function called `is_anagram` that takes two strings and returns `True` if they are anagrams.

You can remove spaces and convert to lowercase using `string.replace(" ", "").lower()`

```
[35]: def is_anagram(word1, word2): word2 = word2.replace(" ", "").lower() word1 = word1.replace(" ", "").lower() return sorted(word1) == sorted(word2)
```

```
[36]: is_anagram("hello", "o hell")
```

```
[36]: True
```

```
[37]: is_anagram("dormitory" , "dirty room")
```

```
[37]: True
```

```
[38]: is_anagram("dormitory" , "dirty rooms")
```

[38]: False

```
[39]: is_anagram("astronomers" , "moon starers")
```

[39]: True

1.3.10 Exercise 10.7.

Write a function called `has_duplicates` that takes a list and returns `True` if there is any element that appears more than once. It should not modify the original list.

You can assume that the list will not have nested lists.

```
[40]: def has_duplicates(t):
    string = list(t) string.sort() for i in range(len(string) - 1):
        if string[i] == string[i + 1]:
            return True
    return False
```

```
[41]: has_duplicates(['a','b','c'])
```

[41]: False

```
[42]: has_duplicates(['a','b','b','c'])
```

[42]: True

```
[43]: has_duplicates(['a','b','c','a'])
```

[43]: True

1.3.11 Exercise 10.10.

To check whether a word is in the word list, you could use the `in` operator, but it would be slow because it searches through the words in order.

Because the words are in alphabetical order, we can speed things up with a bisection search (also known as binary search). You start in the middle and check to see whether the word you are looking for comes before the word in the middle of the list. If so, you search the first half of the list the same way (perform a bisection search on the first half). Otherwise you search the second half.

Either way, you cut the remaining search space in half. If the word list has 113,809 words, it will take about 17 steps to find the word or conclude that it's not there.

Write a function called `in_bisect` that takes a sorted list and a target word and will return `True` if the word is in the list and `False` if it's not.

Hint: it's a recursive function.

```
[44]: # Use this function. No need to rewrite it.
def make_word_list():
    """Reads lines from a file and builds a list."""
    t = []
    fin = open('words.txt')
    for line in fin:
        word = line.strip()
        t.append(word)
    return t

t = make_word_list()
```

```
[45]: # define this function def in_bisect(word_list, word):
    if len(word_list) == 0:
        return False
    index = len(word_list) // 2
    if word_list[index] == word:
        return True
    if word_list[index] > word:
        return in_bisect(word_list[:index], word)
    else:
```

```
[46]: in_bisect(t, "hello")
```

```
[46]: True
```

```
[47]: in_bisect(t, "xyz")
```

```
[47]: False
```

1.3.12 Exercise 10.11

Two words are a “reverse pair” if each is the reverse of the other.

Now that you have the `in_bisect` search, write a script that finds all the reverse pairs in the word list that are 6 letters or longer. (It takes a little bit of time to run.)

```
[57]: reverse_pairs = [] for word in t:
    if len(word) >= 6:
        pair_reversed = word[::-1]
        if in_bisect(t, pair_reversed):
            reverse_pairs.append([word, pair_reversed])
print(reverse_pairs)
```

```
File "<ipython-input-57-c9fce18c2cf7>", line 3
if (len(word) = 6) or (len(word) > 6):
    ^
```

SyntaxError: invalid syntax

1.3.13 Exercise 11.1

Write a function that reads the words in words.txt and stores them as keys in a dictionary. It doesn't matter what the values are. Then you can use the in operator as a fast way to check whether a string is in the dictionary.

Do Exercise 10.10 but this time searching the dictionary using the in operator. You can see how much faster it is to search a dictionary.

```
[49]: def make_word_dictionary():
        fin = open('words.txt')
        t = {}
        index = 0
        for line in fin:
            word = line.strip()
            t[word] = index
        return t

key = make_word_dictionary()

def check_for_string(word, dictionary):
    if word in dictionary:
        return True
    return False
```

```
[50]: "ah" in key
```

```
[50]: True
```

```
[51]: "ahh" in key
```

```
[51]: False
```

```
[52]: check_for_string("ah", key)
```

```
[52]: True
```

```
[53]: check_for_string("ahhhhh", key)
```

```
[53]: False
```

1.3.14 Exercise 12.2

1. Write a program that reads a word list from a file (see Section 9.1) and prints all the sets of words that are anagrams. Here is an example of what the output might look like:

```
['deltas','desalt','lasted','salted','slated','staled']
['retainers','ternaries'] ['generating','greatening']
['resmelts','smelters','termless']
```

Hint: First traverse the entire wordlist to build a dictionary that maps from a collection of letters to a list of words that can be spelled with those letters. The question is, how can you represent the collection of letters in a way that can be used as a key? i.e. The word “eat” and the word “tea” should be in a list associated with a key (‘a’,‘e’,‘t’).

When your script prints the anagram list, have it print the longest list of anagrams first, followed by the second longest, and so on.

```
[54]: def all_anagrams_sorted(): key = {}
    fin = open("words.txt")
    for word in fin:
        letters = []
        for letter in word:
            letters += letter sorted_letters = sorted(letters) sorted_tuple = tuple(sorted_letters) if sorted_tuple in key:
            key[sorted_tuple].append(word)
        else:
            key[sorted_tuple] = [word] anagrams = []
    for word in key.values():
        if len(word) > 1:
            anagrams += word
    sorted_anagrams = sorted(anagrams)
    return sorted_anagrams
```

```
